

Zack Wilson
Senior Planner

“The planning system is difficult to understand at times. I’m keen to help clients understand the planning approval pathways so that we can together achieve quicker approvals, better decisions, and ultimately better places.”

Zack strongly believes seeking town planning advice at an early stage can be invaluable in quantifying development potential of a site and potentially avoiding costly errors and omissions.

He is focused on formulating integrated and practical solutions and believes town planners play a key role in providing positive built environment outcomes through the relationships of public and private interests, and it is these results which Zack strives to deliver. He is passionate about creating great places, balancing commercial outcomes with high quality urban design, sustainability principles and positive community outcomes.

Expertise

His knowledge of Environmental Planning Instruments has been applied in the preparation of Statement of Environmental Effects, planning proposals, due diligence advice, objection letters, Clause 4.6 written variations and other reports to local and state government clients across metropolitan Sydney. His experience extends across a range of commercial, industrial, residential, retail, and significant greenfield sectors, including subdivisions, child-care centres, seniors living, boarding houses and mixed-use developments.

Background

Zack holds a Bachelor of Planning (Macquarie University) and is a registered Town Planner with the Planning Institute of Australia with 5 years’ experience working in private consultancy, providing statutory planning advice, managing client development applications and complying development certificates.
